Tobacco has undergone but little change in the Louisville market since our last. Old crop rules steady. Lugs bring $2.50@3 for light, and $3.25@4.25 for heavy, common. Common leaf, $4@5 for light, and $5@5 50 for heavy. Medium ranges 50 and 75c higher.

Mr. Fred Mook, late of Meade county, has removed with his family to this city, and engaged in the wagon-making business. He is a quiet, industrious man, and is represented to us as being a No. 1 mechanic. We welcome him, and bespeak for him a liberal patronage.

Miss Leila Henly will open a subscription school in the High School building next Monday. Miss Leila's ability as a teacher is so well known to our citizens that praise from us would be like an attempt to paint the lily. We wish all the success that she can possibly desire.

We learn that there was a shooting matinee in the little village of Buford, Ohio, county, on Thursday evening, the 14th inst., between two men named Smith and Williams, which resulted in the latter receiving a serious wound in the abdomen. No further particulars have reached us.

The following gentlemen have made all necessary arrangements to make determined and relentless warfare on the finny tribe at the Falls of Sinking on the 10th of May: Messrs. Brown Helm, T. M. Davenport, Dick Brashear, Wash Payne, Allen Rollins, and M. Robinson, of Stephensport; John Burks, of Holt's Bottom; Joe Gheens, of Jefferson county, and Dave Bell, of Louisville. Send us a mess or two, boys.

Mr. E. A. Baldwin, agent for the Cincinnati Cooperage Company, has purchased twelve hundred acres of fine timber land out in the vicinity of Liberty Hall, and will put one hundred and fifty hands to work at once making staves. This is a good chance for any one out of employment and wanting a good steady job. He pays good prices for hands, and the cash is ready every week.

Mr. P. G. Bryan is in the city representing the well known Piano House of D. H. Baldwin & Co., Louisville. Mr. Bryan has charge of the firm's business along the river from Stephensport to Evansville, Ind., with headquarters at Vincennes, Ind., and will visit all the towns in this section twice a month. As Mr. Bryan has been traveling here for the last twenty years, he is too well known for us to add any thing in behalf of his integrity and business worth.

Mr. Chas. Tinius has again placed us under obligations for a sample of native wine—this time the pure juice of the Concord grape. We have heretofore spoken of the nonintoxicant properties of Mr. Tinius' wines, and reiterate our recommendation to invalids and others to substitute them for the adulterated wine of commerce as a beverage. Were the people to take to the drinking of such instead of whisky and the hog-slop known as beer, drunkenness would soon become an extinct vice.

We are gratified that we are able to report to-day a more encouraging outlook for tobacco plants. Mr. P. V. Duncan, of the firm of P. V. Duncan & Sons, of this city, was out through the country the latter days of last week, and informs us that the warm, "growing" weather since the 20th, has brought the plants to the surface in the greatest abundance. This is good news, and for once we are rejoiced to find that we are an indifferent prophet. The seed was retarded in sprouting, not destroyed, as we feared.

We were shown a handsome cake Monday baked by our city baker, Mr. Albert Fahrenberg, as a present by that gentleman to grace the festal board at the nuptials of his cousin, Miss Bertha Langstroth and Mr. J. K. Gant, jr., of Hopkinsville, which takes place to-morrow at the bride's residence in Evansville, Ind. This cake is in the form of a pyramid, fifteen inches high, and having a base sixteen inches in diameter, mounted with a figure representing the bride with two doves flying to her, and the whole richly ornamented with flowers and wreaths.

We call the attention of our readers to the card in to-day's paper of the new law firm of Allen, Murray & Board, of Hardinsburg and Cloverport, the members being Col. Alfred Allen and Judge Milton Board, of Hardinsburg, and Judge John Allen Murray, of this city. These gentlemen need no recommendation from us to this people. Their ability, probity and industry are proverbial, and there is not a man in the county who would hesitate to entrust them with his legal business, so well does he know that they would do all in the power of mortal men to bring his action to a successful issue.

Last Wednesday our neighboring town of Hartford was the theatre of intense excitement and no little alarm by the popping of pistols on its streets. It appears that a couple of weeks before David Williams was brought to the town under arrest, but made his escape from his guards. Wednesday he unexpectedly put in an appearance on the streets, and the sheriff and a deputy undertook to arrest him. David immediately showed them a clean pair of heels. The officers made a requisition on their "pops," and sent three bullets after the fugitive, who instantly responded with a couple of leaden pellets. These temporarily halted the officers, but David halted not, neither did he tarry. The officers resumed their pursuit, and the last we heard of them the chase was in full blast, David a "long ways" in the lead. Fortunately nobody—not even the traditional innocent bystander—was hurt by the shooting.

We regret that it is our duty to publish a card of the nature of that which appears in our columns this morning from Hon. R. R. Pierce. We regret that his business and ill health have conspired to keep him out of the councils of the state. He has proved his worth as a legislator, and we must not be understood as drawing an invidious comparison between him and his contestants for the nomination, when we say that men like Mr. Pierce can be ill spared from public life. Now that it can not work injury to the other gentlemen, we do not hesitate to state that the information that has reached us in the past few days, through our numerous correspondents, lead us to the belief that he would have found but little trouble in securing the nomination. As matters now stand the issue is complicated. We know not to whom will flow the bulk of the supporters of Mr. Pierce; but, whomsoever it may be, we hope that he will prove himself to be as valuable and industrious a public servant as that gentleman has been.

An Embryo Artist.

Master Willie, the fifteen-year-old son of Dr. W. B. White, druggist, of this city, has executed a life-sized portrait of the late General Robert E. Lee, the revered Confederate military chieftain, which is not only accurate in all its details, but a remarkably life-like presentation of the features and appearance of the dead hero. What is wonderful about this work of art, aside from the extreme youth of the artist, is the fact that every line and stroke of the work was done with a common steel pen and ordinary writing ink. Willie unquestionably possesses rare artistic talents, and his parents will be doing him grievous injustice if they do not place him at some art school where those talents can receive proper cultivation and direction.

Godey's Lady's Book for May

REED MOORMAN.

The Terrible End of a Wild Breckenridge Boy—Hanged by a Mob at Durango, Col.

About the hardest and hottest hole this side of the infernal regions is Durango, Colorado. It is a town that has—while possessing a large element of peaceable, law-abiding citizens—been of late almost exclusively run by the worst cases and hardest characters that go to make up the objectionable side of frontier society. To oppose this class in their devilry is to court certain and violent death, hence the peaceably disposed prefer to let them run their mack unmolested rather than incur extra risks in opposing their savage and unbridled humors.

Among the many men who have wandered from their old Kentucky homes to those western wilds, and, falling into evil associations—and freed from the restraining influences of civilization—became dissipated, wild and reckless, was Reed Moorman, a young man who, though born in Owensboro, had spent all his life, from infancy, in this county, until about four years ago, when he went from here to Colorado. The Denver Tribune, of the 16th instant, reaches us with the intelligence of this young man's tragic end, the history of which is as follows:

It seems that when Reed first went west, he engaged in the business of stage driving, and for a couple of years or more drove a stage plying between Georgetown and Leadville, but recently had been employed by Barlow & Sanderson, of Durango. He had acquired an unenviable reputation in Durango, and it is related of him that, on one occasion, while drunk, he made a bar-room full of men stand in a row, and with his revolver cocked and pointed at their feet compelled them to dance while he whistled the tunes. At another time he made a citizen treat him to whisky at the muzzle of his pistol. The lawless action that brought his wild career to a summary close is thus recorded by the Tribune:

"To cap the climax, last Saturday night about 10 o'clock, he had a difficulty with a Mexican, whom he followed into the variety theatre, and as he entered the door he discharged his pistol, apparently intending to shoot into the floor, but the ball of which entered the arm of a man named Perry Steeffee, passing through it and striking another man named James K. P. Prindle in the stomach, the ball lodging in the spine. When shot, Prindle staggered and exclaimed, 'You have shot an innocent man,' and immediately expired.

"Prindle was a native of Redford, Michigan, near Detroit; was 38 years old; had been out west for fourteen years, and was a miner. He was a single man, and liked by all who knew him.

"After the shooting Moorman attempted to escape, but was captured after a race of a few hundred yards. Yesterday (Sunday) the coroner's jury held an inquest, returning a verdict that the deceased met his death by a pistol shot in the hands of Moorman. The indignation against Moorman ran high, and the vigilante committee determined to make him an example, so at 11 o'clock last night they proceeded in a body, broke open the door of the jail, and after binding the prisoner hand and foot and gagging him, they quietly proceeded to a tree in the public place, and there hung him. His body was cut down this morning by the deputy sheriff, and the coroner's jury returned a verdict that deceased died by the hands of parties unknown."

On his person was found a letter from a young lady at Stephensport, this county, to whom it appears from the tenor of the letter, deceased was engaged, though in opposition (possibly without the knowledge) of her parents. The Tribune publishes the letter in full, and from reading it we take her to be a good, Christian girl, whose advice it would have been well for Reed to have heeded.

Deceased was a young man of about 25, and was a son of the late John Moorman, of Owensboro, where Reed was born. Both parents dying during his infancy, he was taken charge of and reared by relatives in this county. While here he was a quiet, well-behaved young man, and no one who knew him ever dreamed of his turning out to be the wild, reckless character who met his death at the hands of a Colorado mob on the night of the 9th inst. He comes of good stock, none better, on both sides, and the teachings and surroundings of his earlier years were not calculated to develop him into the reckless desperado he apparently became.

JOE JARRETT'S LUCK.

A Man Who Manages to Marry Women Who Skip Out With Other Fellows—His Latest Experience.

Mr. Joe Jarrett is a middle-aged, well-to-do farmer, who resides in the vicinity of Clifton Mills, this county. He is a substantial citizen in the best meaning of the term, and has the hearty sympathy of all who know him in the great trouble that has recently come upon him.

Mr. Jarrett, some years ago, married him a wife, and every body thought the couple were living contentedly if not happily together. One fine morning his wife eloped in company with a man who had weaned her affection from her husband. It is more than likely that, had he overtaken the guilty pair he would have imbrued his hands in the seducer's blood. Mr. Jarrett, in due course of time, procured a divorce, and consoled himself with another wife.

One day, during the term of the circuit court which ended last week, the last wife, imitating the example of her predecessor in the affections and bed of Joseph, packed her personal effects in her trunk, and either accidentally or through design, mixed with them some title deeds and other valuable documents belonging to her husband, and left home accompanied by a young man named Dallas Beauchamp. The runaway pair repaired to Stephensport, where they proposed to take a down packet. Mr. Jarrett, who was in Hardinsburg when the erring couple made their hegira, returned home and found silence brooding over his hearthstone like a lorn bird over its rifled nest. Ascertaining the direction taken by the elopers he set off in hot pursuit, and succeeded in treeing them about midnight in the hotel at Stephensport, sound asleep, but in separate rooms.

Well, did he shoot the villainous destroyer of his happiness dead? Not much. Joe is a sensible man, and not lacking in solid philosophy. He is not much of a believer—notwithstanding his experience—in the theory that all the blame rests with the man when a married woman shares in this sort of adventure. He quietly roused his wife, made her return the valuable documents she had secured, and then, fearing that the couple might not have money sufficient to take them far enough away from him, magnanimously made her a present of $100.

Who will now dare assert that we have not good right to brag of our Breckenridge men? Here was a man who could have slain the invader and destroyer of his home, and all the world would have held him guiltless of murder, and many would have applauded the act. But he was wise enough to know that the killing of her paramour would not restore the lost virtue of his wife, and philosophic enough to feel that the fellow would never have dared to make advances toward the woman had she not made known to him in some manner that those advances would not be repelled. And knowing this and feeling thus, he displayed a moral heroism that is as unique for its sublimity as it is exceptional in the history of mankind. Therefore it is that we exclaim: "Well done, Joe Jarrett, and pity it is that the world is not full of men like you; then we would have less of bloodshed over worthless women."

It was reported here yesterday that considerable alarm existed at Cannelton over the ravages of spinal meningitis there.

ANOTHER INDIANA TRAGEDY.

What Came of Mixing Fiddles and Whisky and an Old Quarrel—A Murder Near Troy.

Tuesday evening of last week, near the village of Troy, on the lower coast of the opposite county of Perry, was enacted one of those cold-blooded tragedies that are of late becoming far too frequent for the good name of our sister state of Indiana. The particulars of the sanguinary affair, as related to us by a citizen of Troy who paid our city a business visit last Friday, are about as follows:

It appears that a dance was given at a farmhouse about three miles from the village, and among those who attended were two young men named John Lynch and George McDaniel. Between these two there had been a previous misunderstanding about a business transaction, which produced what is termed "bad blood." It seems that in the bushes near the house temporarily transformed into a temple to Terpsichore, some citizen more enterprising than law-abiding had set up for that occasion only a "jug tavern" where he supplied whisky by the dram to those bibulously inclined. It was here that the two unfortunate young men met, and here their quarrel was renewed. Hot words soon grew red-hot between them, and blows followed the words. Lynch, seeing that he would come out worsted from the fistic encounter, drew a revolver, and, without a word of warning to let his antagonist or the two or three bystanders know that he had a weapon, placed the muzzle at McDaniel's head, pulled trigger, and sent a ball crashing through his brain. The poor fellow fell and the murderer fled into the darkness of the night. As soon as those present recovered from the horror produced by the unexpected crime, they conveyed McDaniel to a farmhouse close by and physicians were summoned, who did all that was in the power of science to alleviate his sufferings—to do more was impossible—and next morning he was conveyed to his home, where he expired Wednesday night. His murderer was still at large at our last advices.

Some Turnpike Talk.

To our farmer friends who are agitating the question of piking the roads from here to the Falls of Rough, and also to Patesville and Fordsville, we desire to say a few earnest words. We admit, without argument, that any or all of these improvements, would prove of great benefit to our little city. There is no disputing that fact. But the benefit will spring solely from the increase of trade it will bring to us, and the profits we may realize in handling that trade, and there it would stop. Our real estate would experience no appreciable enhancement, and in the matter of the trade, you will enjoy as much of the benefits as we do from the fact that you will not only gain increased facilities for reaching our market, but realize from good and safe roads in bad weather an inestimable saving of losses you now incur from the breaking of wagons and injury to stock. However, there is plenty of time in the future to run into details. What we propose to say at present is this: If you are really in earnest, Cloverport will not be backward nor niggard in her subscriptions to build these roads. She is not able to build them herself, nor should you be selfish enough to ask her to do it, when you know that it will, in the increased value of your lands lying along the roads, and in easy reach of them, benefit you ten dollars to her one. But then she will ask you no odds on that point. If you will fix a time and place for a meeting to confer upon the matter, say at Liberty Hall, or any other point that may suit you better, and send word of the fact to this office, we will guarantee that you will be met by a committee of the business men of Cloverport, representing its capital and enterprise, and if you will do your part in the consultation that may follow, we promise that you will not find our city backward nor illiberal in doing its share toward the accomplishment of your wishes. Talk is cheap, but this is business. Let us hear from you, gentlemen.

HARDINSBURG.

Court adjourned last Friday.

We'll adjourn now and go a-fishing.

James E. Stone has been ill for several days.

Wm. K. Withers has finished planting corn.

Capt. Haycraft is some pumking in a law speech.

Miss Annie Jones is visiting relatives at Big Spring.

Mr. Lee Harl, of California, arrived last week, and will remain in town a week or so.

If there are no spring "potes" there may be some goats tramping about in the county.

Chairman Taylor will not go much on a convention until he gets his "crap" laid by, no how.

G. W. Beard and W. B. Stith were engaged last week invoicing T. M. Miller's dry goods store.

We would like to insure our dog since he has had his tail nipped off. The company must be well secured.

It looks like Bro. Beard is going to have a clear field for the legislature, but things are not always as they seem.

W. R. Haynes has brought suit on behalf of the commonwealth of Kentucky, against the old board of trustees here for $500.

John W. Bates, deceased, has had his estate settled in the circuit court, and there is nothing going to the general creditors.

Jailer Slaton will clean somebody out if they don't mind. He is running that jail, and if he sends one of his prisoners to hell and back, it's nobody's business.

BIG SPRING.

Good morning, Mr. Editor. My name is Bildad the Shuhite, from the land of Uz. I live in the town of Big Spring, which is now overflowing with mud.

We have not suffered for weeks for the want of rain; but for the want of "a rest."

But slow progress is being made by the good people of this vicinity in the way of farming. Corn ground is not more than half broken.

Dr. Strother, our enterprising physician, has been ill for several days, but is now convalescent.

Mrs. James Moorman is quite poorly. She had a cancer removed from her breast last winter, and has not been entirely well since.

Our blacksmith, Mr. William Burkhardt, has added an engine to his establishment to turn his grindstone, rather than hire a boy. He is the most entire man we ever "behold grinding hoes."

Our election is now numbered with the things that were, and Judge Shacklett will judge you as he would be judged by you. Mr. Morris and the "Locust Hill" girls will act as policemen, While Dr. Strother, Jas. Paul and Johnnie Meador will see that the geese of this place do not intrude upon the ganders' swimming quarters, viz: Magne fimtis.

Among the visitors this week are Miss Puss West, visiting Miss Sallie Meador; Mrs. Jack Moorman and daughter, visiting Mrs. Dr. Board; Mrs. Jackson, visiting her daughter, Mrs. J. M. Dempsey.

Madam Rumor says that ere long Bewleyville and our city will join hands for life—or a divorce. You will have to ask her, though, Mr. Editor.

"Blue Jeans" and "Young Blue Jeans" are thinking of having a slander suit, in which "Blue Jeans" claims $30,000 damages for injuring his literary reputation.

We would like to visit Bewleyville, but, "My dear Tommy, those cheese" are not all gone to Kansas yet.

Mr. Editor, there are some things we can not understand. One is, how a man can live single or without a wife. Another, how men can chew tobacco without getting sick, when it kills other cattle. Please explain these to your friend, BILDAD.

From Another Correspondent.

Miss Annie Naylor is teaching a subscription school here now, and has quite a number of "young ideas," and we are confident that she is a very efficient tutoress, for when she brings a slight frown over that bewitching pair of eyes it means biz; don't it, Dolph?

Our singing every Sunday night is very entertaining as well as instructive.

Oh, I wish some of the boys would leave, or somebody's school would close, or something else happen, so I would have something to write about.

I roomed with a young man a few nights ago who was love-sick, and unfortunately for him he talked in his sleep, and this is what he said that night:

"I love to go up on the hill,
And get my charming Lil,
And take her down through town,
And pass by Mr. Brown,
And then on up to singing,
And hear the music ringing."

Then he turned over and died off again.
YOUNG BLUE JEANS.

Particular Notice.

We are prepared to make fair advances on shipments of tobacco to Messrs. Sawyer, Wallace & Co., New York. Since the great and positive change from our style to the Burley, three-fourths or more of our kinds can find their value only at the seaboard, where the tobacco is sold directly to the exporter instead of the speculator on the western breaks. This is the fourth year of our agency, and we are pleased to say no one to whom we have furnished money has lost a cent, but invariably made a profit. To insure speedy sales, the tobacco should be prized in what farmers term "prizing order," by no means factory dried, except very bright, thin new ground. Where it has been manured in the hill it is too heavy for the fashion. We have the very lowest freight tariff. Farmers and dealers will consult their best interests by giving us a call. P. V. DUNCAN & SONS.

Step Short, Who Want to Buy Again!

Persons who have not been supplied with Brown's Twin Bed-Spring will save money by waiting until they can have an opportunity of getting these Springs, as they are the Cheapest, Best and Most Durable Spring ever offered to the public. About 1,600 sets have been sold in Meade and Breckenridge during the past, and they have given entire satisfaction. I shall visit all the people of these two counties this year with Springs, and if any one wishing Springs will notify me by card or leave word at the Bed-Spring office, I will call upon them at once. The price is: $5 for full set, $3 50 for single stead, and $2 50 for lounge. I will take old Feathers in exchange, allowing a liberal price for the same. Thankful for past patronage, I ask a continuance of the same.

WINTERSMITH'S
Tonic Sirup
Or, IMPROVED CHILL CURE.

A Certain Cure for every form of Fever and Ague. The Cure is Permanent. The chill once broken will not return.

This preparation has all the virtues of quinine, without any of its disagreeable effects. All who have had Chills and Fever and have taken quinine, calomel or arsenic, (which are the principal ingredients of most of the medicines now in use) are aware that the medicines often leave the system in an unhealthy condition, making it more difficult to relieve it of their effects than of the original disease. Wintersmith's Improved Chill Cure leaves the system in a perfectly healthy condition, with no bad effects in any way to be worn off. Unlike chill remedies generally, it requires no purgative to be taken with it, the medicine itself acting gently and agreeably upon the liver and bowels, effectually removing the cause of the disease, not merely temporarily checking it.
