BRECKENRIDGE NEWS.

WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 9, 1893.

To Our Correspondents.

If our correspondents will strictly observe the following rules and suggestions, they will greatly facilitate the work in this office and assist us in making a more newsy paper:

1. Write on one side of the paper only. 2. Paragraph your communications—that is, when you are done with one item begin the next one on the line below and at least one inch from the left edge of the paper.

3. We are pretty good at deciphering hieroglyphics, but you can aid us greatly by writing as legibly as possible. 4. Give us the news and nothing but the news.

5. The following are good news items: Deaths, births, marriages, accidents, fires, sickness, storms, murders, fights, burglaries, arrests, elopements, conditions of crops, status of business, real-estate transfers and other business transactions; visitors in your community from a distance, and state who they are, where they are from and who they are visiting; persons of your community who are visiting at a distance, and state where and who they are visiting; lectures, speaking, public gatherings, school and church affairs.

6. The following are not good news items: Daily calls or visits in the same neighborhood or immediately adjoining neighborhood are of too frequent occurrence and are of interest to too few people to be good news items; neighborhood jokes only amuse a few, while they mortify others, and are not good news items; the correspondent's opinions on great national questions is not news, and our readers don't care for it—the editors prefer to write the editorials; "Mr. A. called on Miss B. last Sunday," is not a good news item—he can call every Sunday for all the great majority of the News readers care; "Miss C. seems to be 'stuck' on Mr. D. by the way she cast sheep's eyes in his direction at prayer-meeting last Wednesday night," is nothing new—she is probably always "stuck" on somebody.

7. To spell and punctuate correctly is an admirable accomplishment, but it takes a splendid education and an immense amount of practice to even approximate perfection in these arts. Don't let a false modesty deter you from writing because you think you might make a few mistakes; "mistakes are not haystacks," and the most experienced and accomplished writers frequently make them. We have a man employed to straighten out these little affairs.

8. Send us something every week. If it is only two or three items, and they are news, it is better than if you would send us a whole column of chaff.

9. Send us all the news. There is not a neighborhood in which there is not enough occurrences every week to make a nice little batch of newsy items.

10. Use your best judgment as to what is good news and what is of little consequence. Some correspondents will take a half-column in describing some frivolous thing, and if a man's house is destroyed by fire he will barely mention the fact in a two-line item. This is bad news judgment.

11. Anything appalling or sensational, such as a shooting or cutting scrape, a big fire, an elopement, etc., are of such uninfrequent occurrence in this section that minute accounts of them make good reading matter, and our news gatherers should give us as complete accounts of such happenings as possible.

12. Be particularly careful to state the facts in every instance, especially when it is anything personal.

13. Domestic disturbances, separations of husbands and wives, etc., should never be mentioned till it is a sure go and the breach is so broad that it can never be closed. Sometimes these little disturbances happen in the "best-regulated families" and are smoothed over again. In such instances a ventilation in a newspaper might fan the flame into new life, and this would be all wrong. While such news are sweet morsels of news and read by everybody, they should never be published till all efforts at reconciliation have failed; and then adhere strictly to the truth without exaggeration.

14. Sign your name to every communication, if you want to assure its publication. We must know whose items we are publishing. Your name will not be published, but remain a secret between you and yourself.

IT'S HOGGISH

HAVE THE BLUE GRASS PEOPLE PROVED THEMSELVES TO BE IN REGARD TO U. S. SENATORS.

Five Senators Are What Western and Southern Kentucky Have Had in One Hundred Years.

WE DO THE VOTING, BUT GIVE THE PIE TO OTHERS.

We take the privilege of clipping the following tabular statement from the Glasgow Times. Our readers should peruse it and see how our section of the state has been hogged in regard to United States Senators:

"Last week, The Times charged that, in the matter of Senatorial succession, Central Kentucky had been persistently hoggish. This week, it proposes to demonstrate the truth of its position, and demonstrate it so clearly that a blind man can see.

It has been 101 years since the organization of Kentucky as a State. During that period, Kentucky has been represented by thirty-six United States Senators. That the people of Southern and Western Kentucky may see for themselves just how much of the Senatorial timber has been cut in their neck of the woods, The Times subjoins the full list of United States Senators from Kentucky, the counties they were elected from, and their length of service:

Table with columns: NAME, COUNTY, YEARS. Lists names of senators and their counties and terms.

In the figures given for terms of each Senator, fractions of a year are not taken into account. Nearly three years are gained by this disregard of fractions.

A study of this table reveals the remarkable fact that, during the 206 years of Senatorial service since the formation of the State—there being two United States Senators—that great section South and West of Louisville, comprising nearly one-half the area of the State and much more than one-half the Democratic majority, has had the Senatorship for only twenty-six years in the terms of Table with columns: NAME, YEARS. Lists names of senators and their terms.

Total number of Senators 206. In this period the two years of Maehen's services should not be considered, as he was appointed by Gov. Leslie.

Out of thirty-six United States Senators the Democratic strongholds of Southern and Western Kentucky—about one-half the State in area, and much more than one-half of it from a Democratic standpoint—get only five Senators, and one of these by appointment. In 206 years of Senatorial service we have been given only twenty-four years, exclusive of Maehen's two-year appointment by Gov. Leslie. Central Kentucky has furnished the Senator for an aggregate of 173 years. During all this time the State has been held in the Democratic column by the rock-ribbed majorities of Southern and Western Kentucky. They have done all the fighting. They have borne the brunt of the battle. They have made the election of Democratic United States Senators possible. The fruits of their many and magnificent victories have been wrested from them. They have been the hewers of wood and drawers of water, the private soldiers in the battle, for their blue-grass brethren.

How long shall this unequal, unjust condition of affairs continue? Just so long as the people of Southern and Western Kentucky do not stand together for their rights—no longer.

We submit these facts and figures to the Democratic voters of Barren county and ask them,

Why should not every legislative candidate, for either house, be called upon to declare his Senatorial choice?

Why should not every member of the Legislature from Southern and Western Kentucky declare himself for a United States Senator from among his home people?

It can not be too strongly impressed upon the people that in selecting their legislators they are electing their United States Senators.

Waiting for the inevitable.

It was awfully funny until the quiet gaze of his chief rested upon him, then under that serene surveillance the humor seemed to vanish in an unaccountable way. However, as he had begun with the entertainment, he was resolved to carry it through.

So you are a staunch Republican, are you? remarked the chief.

From way back, sir, replied the clerk.

And have a heart filled with rejoicing, eh?

I'm full to the neck, sir.

Very well, you're too good a Republican to labor under the degrading rule of a Democratic administration, returned the chief. I think that party is still in power. I'll call its attention to your case and see what can be done to relieve you from so vile a servitude.

There was some more fun for those who had witnessed the parade and listened to the speech of the chief, but there was none for the Republican, who now exists in daily expectation of receiving notice that the government will be pleased to hear of his resignation.—Kate Field's Washington.
